THE JOURNAL OF THE SIAM SOCIETY

founded in 1904

The Siam Society Under Royal Patronage is one of Thailand’s oldest and most active learned organizations. The object of the Society is to investigate and to encourage the arts and sciences in Thailand and neighboring countries.

Since the Society launched the Journal in 1904, it has become one of the leading regularly issued scholarly publications in the Greater Mekong Region. The Journal is international in outlook, carrying original articles of enduring value in English, Thai, French, and German. The Society also publishes the Natural History Bulletin.

Since its beginning, the Society has been amassing monographs, journals, and material of scholarly interest on Thailand and its neighbors. The Society’s library, open to members, has one of the best research collections on the region.

Information is given at the end of the volume on how to become a member for those interested in Society’s library, lectures, tours, publications and other benefits.
Contents

Abstracts

Obituary for Leh Tsan Kway
8

Obituary for O. W. Wolters xvi

Articles

RICHARD D. CUSHPVAN, TRANSLATOR AND DAVID K. WYATT, EDITOR

- Translating Thai Poetry: Cushman, and King Narai's "Long Song Prophecy for Ayuthaya"
1

ATTACHAK SATTAYANURAK

- Intellectual Origins of Strong Kingship (Part 2) 12

HERBERT R. SWANSON

- Origins of the Nineteenth Century Transformation of Cosmology in Northern Siam: The Nan Intra-McGilvary Debates on Science and Religion 32

HE PING

- Yunnanese in Thailand: Past and Present
40

ALAN D. CAMERON AND KENNETH G. CLARK

- Revenue Document from Thai-Occupied Kengtung
46

TIN AUNG CHAIN

- The Chiang Mai Campaign of 1787–1788: Beyond the Chronicular Account 51

TIN MAUNG KYI

- Thai Descendants in Burma: A Thai Court Dancer's Family
57

Exhibition of Books from the collection of M.L Manich Jumsai

- On M.L, Manich Jumsai
  - Address by Dr. Sumet Jumsai, 4 October 2001
65

- On Books from the Ayutthayan Era
  - Address by Michael Smithies, 4 October 2001
66

- Ayutthaya Era Books
73
More on M.L. Manich Jumsai
Address by Sumet Jumsai, 11 October 2001

75

On Books from the Nineteenth Century
Address by Michael Smithies, 11 October 2001

78

Bangkok Era Books

86

From the Archives

H.R.H. Prince Wan Wai Thayakon Krommun Naradhip Bongprabandh
Thai Word Coining

90

Notes

Thongsuk Banthongchit
Wat Chaiyaphrakrama, Taling Chan, Bangkok

94

Chris Baker, Translator
The Antiquarian Society of Siam Speech of King Chulalongkorn

95

Review Articles

Hjorleifur Jonsson
A Regional Approach to Thailand; Reflections on the writings of A. Thomas Kirsch

100

Oliver Hargrave
Dark City, White Space: A review of books featuring black and white photography on life and death in Bangkok

115

Reviews

Bachchan Kumar, editor
Glimpses of Early Indo-Indonesian Culture, Collected Papers of Himansu Bhawan Sarkar
Reviewed by Professor Emeritus Srisurang Poothupya

123

National Library, Department of Fine Arts
Tamrā Bhāb Devarūp lae Devatā Nabagraha
Reviewed by Michael Wright

123

Dan F. Bradley
Simo: The Story of a boy of Siam
Reviewed by Ronald D. Renard

129

Anne Peters, compiler and Heinz Bechert, editor
Burmese Manuscripts
Reviewed by Peter Skilling

131
Contents

Martin Stuart-Fox
Historical Dictionary of Laos (2nd edition)
Reviewed by Penny Van Esterik 132

Sid Brown
The Journey of One Buddhist Nun: Even Against the Wind
Reviewed by Penny Van Esterik 132

John Girling
Interpreting Development: Capitalism, Democracy and the Middle Class in Thailand
Reviewed by Gary Suwannarat 133

Elizabeth Hinton
Oldest Brother's Story: Tales of the Pwo Karen
Reviewed by Christina Fink 136

Kasian Tejapira
Commodifying Marxism: The Formation of Modern Thai Radical Culture, 1927–1938
Reviewed by Craig J. Reynolds 137

Pinkaew Laungaramsri
Redefining Nature: Karen Ecological Knowledge and the Challenge to the Modern Conservation Paradigm
Reviewed by Hjorleifur Jonsson 139

Andrew Turton, editor
Challenging the Intellectual and Political Limitations of Essentialist and Racist Thinking. Review of Civility and Savagery: Social Identity in Thai States
Reviewed by John Mckinnon 141

In Brief 148

Other Titles Received 153

Notes for Contributors 154

Back Issues 156

Publications 157

Yunnanese in Thailand: Past and Present

He Ping

Among the Chinese or the minority people in Thailand, Yunnanese is one of the most remarkable communities. Ethnically Yunnanese includes Han and Hui (Muslim), and most of them, especially the new immigrants in recent decades, can still speak Yunnanese dialects. This paper is to give a comprehensive introduction, based on the information reported by scholars and recent field work by the author in Chiang Mai and Chiang Rai, to the origin, the past and the present of this special immigrant group in Thailand.

Revenue Document from Thai-Occupied Kengtung

ALAN D. CAMERON and KENNETH G. CLARK

Two articles merged into one that appeared in the Burma Peacock, are reprinted here. One portion of the merged article presents information on a revenue document executed in Kengtung (Chiang Tung) when it was under the Thai administration during World War II. The other portion puts the document discussed into the wider context of Thailand’s position during the War.

The Chiang Mai Campaign of 1787-1788: Beyond the Chronicler’s Account

TUIN AUNG CHAIN

The official Myanmar chronicle, Hmammar Mahayazawindawgyi (Glass Palace Chronicle) was prepared by court historians to tell the great deeds accomplished during each reign. In this tradition, the Hmammar Mahayazawindawgyi thus describes the Chiang Mai Campaign of 1787-1788 by giving a list of the troops taking part, the routes of the march, and the major engagements. However, by utilizing other sources, such as the plan of operations and Thai sources, it shatters the image presented in the chronicle of an ordered world in which the king was largely in control of events.

Thai Descendants in Burma: A Thai Court Dancer’s Family

TIN MAUNG KYI

In the events following the fall of Ayutthaya in 1767, Thai royal dancers from the court of Ayutthaya, brought to Mandalay as prisoners of war, still recall their Thai ancestry. Although they gradually lost aspects of their Thai-ness, such as their language, the ability to dance in the Thai way, and even the masks used in the dance, they nevertheless continue to take pride in their heritage.
EDITORIAL

Even a quick look at bookstands in Bangkok reveals a vibrant publishing industry in Thailand not just in Thai but also in English. Among the dozens of items on display are novels and collections of short stories, many of which deal with Westerners in the country. Although quite a few focus on a particular group of Westerners who spend significant portions of their lives on a privately-owned street connecting Silom with Surtwong near the Sala Daeng BTS station, there are some works of a more profound nature.

To the student of social science, novels and other types of fiction often provide insights to the people untouched by research reports. Descriptions of people and places in novels, although not perhaps accurate in specifics, are sufficient in so many non-specific ways that the reader receives a clear understanding of the life of the times.

The significance of this source for researchers has been growing as more novels are written. Novel writing in general is not an ancient form of literature—"invented prose narratives of considerable length" did not become the dominant form of English literature until the nineteenth century. Although the earliest novels written about Thailand were not completed until the late-nineteenth century, the events described in them are already olden if not archaic.

It may well be that because much of the fiction written on Thailand, such as that gracing the country's bookstands is not great literature, no one has taken the time to study the novels on this place. But there are worthy of renown. To name a few, Pierre Boulle's anti-war Le Pont de la Riviere Kwaï (not to be confused with a movie showing would-be Thai villagers looking like peasants from Kandy, Thai women porters giving shampoos to the nake saboteurs, and a blown-up bridge), Yukio Mishima's Akatsuki no Tora (Temple of Dawn), and Jack Reynold's A Woman of Bangkok.

But there are other authors that almost no one remembers whose novels also shed light on the life of the times in Thailand's past. Two such writers are Reginald Campbell and Alice Eckert-Rotholz.

Campbell is known for his non-fiction Teak Wallah, written in 1935 which describes his life as a forest assistant in and around Lampang. What is not so well known is that he wrote such novels as Tiger Valley, Elephant King, Poo Lorn of the Elephants, Striped Majesty, The Keepers of Elephant Valley, and Brown Wife—or White? At one time these works must have been known because Tiger Valley was made into the British film, The Girl from Mandalay, starring Donald Cook and Kay (the girl) Lankaker. Indeed someone still knows about it because Tiger Valley sells on Internet used books sites for S100 and up.

But not many scholars know about Campbell's fiction. Brown Wife—or White? tells of the jungle but also of gender relations and the dealings of teak assistants with northern Thai women. Although gender is an important topic, and the fact that northern Thai women stayed with the mainly single European teak wallahs is well known, no formal study of this has been done. The assistants, mostly because of the disdain the upper (and middle) crust held regarding such unions, rarely discussed forthrightly and all but never described them in their memoirs (such as Teak Wallah). However, in this book, the issue is addressed directly. When Teak Wallah Denton goes to Bangkok he falls for the beautiful and somehow available Mrs. Fanshawe. How he resolves the dilemma he faces regarding his housemate, Chan Som, and their son in the north is the subject of the book. Although Campbell was a product of his times, noting in Teak Wallah that the only emotion the northern Thai showed was "fear," he manages to view Chan Som's position with sensitivity (and not without some ability in spinning a narrative).

Alice Ekert-Rotholz lived in Bangkok from 1939-1952, where her husband practiced in the British Dispensary. In addition to two novels on Thailand she also wrote A Net of Gold on the Netherlands Indies just prior to the Second World War. The two on Thailand deal primarily with Europeans in Bangkok. The Time of the Dragons deals with an incident Ekert-Rotholz claims is true; a Scandinavian family becoming "inexplicably involved with a case of industrial espionage between [ed., of all places] Bangkok and Saigon" resulting in the arrest of several family members.

Almost nothing has been written about Europeans able to move around freely in Bangkok at this time. There were surely few of them—George B. McFarland—who ran a typewriter shop—was the best known and almost the only American (with the Thai title of Phra At Withayakhorn, and despite being a missionary, he was above the detention most Americans and British suffered). Others were Vichy French, Germans and other northern Europeans, as well as White Russians. Although the book takes the reader to Angkor, Cholon, Shanghai, and elsewhere in the region, the information on Bangkok is not duplicated elsewhere.

Identifying and using new sources of information is an essential part of scholarship. This issue of the Journal of the Siam Society features new scholars, new approaches, and new areas of study. In addition, the JSS also brings to light older subjects that should be of interest to the readers.

Among the oldest of the items are addresses made at two exhibits at the Siam Society of rare books from the collection of M.L. Mamehn Jamsai. One exhibit was of books from the Ayuthayan period while the second was of books from the Bangkok era. In addresses by Sumet Jamsai at each exhibit, we are introduced to his father as a scholar, researcher, book collector, and family member, Michael Smithies, also giving an address at each exhibit, discussed the contents of the books and the times and circumstances in which they were written.

Since many of these sources, not well-known to scholars, are available in the Siam Society library, their discussion in this issue may direct readers to making use of our nicely upgraded and better organized library.

Sources from countries north and west of Thailand are used innovatively in three other articles. Three from Myanmar/Burma include Professor Tun Aung Chaim's investigation of the Chiang Mai Campaign of 1787-1788. As he notes in his concluding paragraph, "A venture beyond the chronicle ... shatters the image presented in the chronicle of an ordered world in which the King was largely in control of events". Thai travelers to Mandalay have often been introduced to descendants of Thai prisoners of war taken captive over two centuries ago. One of the first efforts to record the conditions in which they found themselves, having completely forgotten the Thai language but nevertheless recalling their heritage with pride, is by one such descendant, Dr. Tin Maung Kyi. Yet another interesting aspect of Thai-Burmese contacts is in the revenue document from the Sahara Thai Doem Province (as Chiang Tung/Kengtung) was known from 1942-1946 when it was under Thai control. This article, by Alan D. Cameron and Kenneth G. Clark, is reproduced here by permission of The Burman Peacock, an excellent but little-known journal devoted to the philately of that country. From further north, in Yunnan, China, have come immigrants to Thailand for centuries. Without discussing the origin of the Tai peoples and their movement south, possibly through Yunnan, into what is now Thailand, there have been Yunnanese immigrants moving south for centuries. Most accounts of these peoples have been from the point of view of non-Yunnanese. In this paper, He Ping endeavors to present their own point of view and attitudes about living in northern Thailand.

Another area not well-studied is the intellectual history of Thailand. This issue includes two articles dealing with this field. Herbert R. Swanson and Atthisak Sattayarak consider transformations of the Thai worldview and cosmology in the nineteenth century. Swanson, a church historian schooled at the Princeton Seminary and based in Chiang Mai, studies dialogues between a predecessor of his at Princeton, Daniel McGilvary, and one of the
The Journal of the Siam Society
Patrons of the Siam Society

Patron
His Majesty King Bhumibol Adulyadej

Vice-Patrons
Her Majesty Queen Sirikit
His Royal Highness Crown Prince Maha Vajiralongkorn
Her Royal Highness Princess Maha Chakri Sirindhorn
Her Royal Highness Princess Galyani Vadhana Krom Luang Naradhiwas Rajanagarinda

Honorary President
Her Royal Highness Princess Galyani Vadhana Krom Luang Naradhiwas Rajanagarinda

Honorary Vice-President
Mom Kobkaew Abhakara na Ayudhya
His Serene Highness Prince Subhadradis Diskul

Council of the Siam Society, 2000-2002

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Position</th>
<th>Name</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>President</td>
<td>Mrs. Bilaibhan Sampatisiri</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Vice-Presidents</td>
<td>Prof. Krisda Arunwongse</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Dr. Olarn Chaiprayat</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Mr. Paul G. Russell</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Leader, Natural History Section</td>
<td>Dr. Weerachai Nanakorn</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Honorary Secretary</td>
<td>Mrs. Monita Singhakowin</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Honorary Treasurer</td>
<td>Mr. Kenneth White</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Honorary Librarian</td>
<td>Mrs. Sharon O'Toole</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Honorary Editor, JSS</td>
<td>Dr. Ronald D. Renard</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Honorary Editor, NHB</td>
<td>Dr. Warren Y. Brockelman</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Members of Council</td>
<td>Dr. Woraphat Arthayukdi</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Mr. Poomchai Lamsami</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Dr. Dhiravat na Pomhejra</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Mrs. Mira Kim Prachaharn</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Mr. John Reid</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Mr. James Rooney</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Mr. Vara-Poj Snidvongs</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Dr. Chaisak Suwanrikul</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>